Orland Park and Palos Considering 4 Year High

Plans for the proposed four year high school for the Orland-Palos community are beginning to take definite shape. For several months, President Walter R. Schussler and members of the Orland school board have been in consultation with school authorities throughout the state. They and Principal Perry Rawland have visited various community and township high schools, inspecting their plants, inquiring into their tax incomes and checking operating costs and the result of their investigation has shown conclusively that a four year high school for this community is not only desirable, but entirely within reasonable expectation.

Sometime ago, the local board and Principal Rawland were invited to meet with a group of people in Palos Township who were also interested in the four year high school plan. As a result of this meeting and of the investigations made, it was decided that a Community High School from a combined Orland-Palos districts was an excellent and practical solution of the four year high school problem. A meeting was therefore held in the Orland Park School last Wednesday evening. This meeting was attended by representatives from Orland and Palos townships and by the Orland Park School Board and members of the high school faculty. President Schussler presided at this meeting and distributed a five page brochure which embodied a complete report on the investigation and giving facts and figures showing the necessity and feasibility of the plan proposed.

Mr. Whiteside, attorney for the County Supt. of Schools and also attorney for the Non-High School District Board of Education, was present by special invitation. Mr. Whiteside is an authority on school law and has a complete knowledge of the school situation throughout the State, and discussed informally the proposition of the new district and gave those present, complete and authoritative information on all the points to be considered in this matter.

For many years, a two year Non-High School District High School has been successfully operated in Orland Park. Two years ago, the course was extended to include a third year. The curriculum provided was in accordance with the standard requirements and the school has enjoyed full and favorable recognition from the state. Those students who, after graduation, wished to complete their final year, have been accepted in Chicago and other four year High Schools with full credit for work done here and all of them have been able to successfully complete their high school education in these other schools.

There has been, however, a steadily growing demand for a complete course that can be given locally. Some of the reasons for this arise from local needs as well as from conditions in nearby schools which the students must attend. These schools all have one or more of the following shortcomings:

Too far away; inconvenient; transportation uncertain and expensive.

Too large, stifling leadership development; inadequate out door recreation facilities.

Located in industrial communities; lacking desirable cultural and social background.

Too limited a program; weak on one or more of the following vital local needs:

1. General cultural program.
2. Physical education; all weak here.
3. College preparation.
4. Commercial department.
5. Industrial program. Argo only strong one here.
6. Agricultural program; a local need and all weak here.
7. Homemaking training.

The proposed district would include all of Orland and Palos townships except the portion of District 116 in Palos lying north-west of the Sanitary District Canal.

Watch for the continuation of this article in next week's issue.

Youths Lose Control of Car; One Killed

Ours is a world of contradictions. Here, security; there, destruction; here, neighborliness; there, hate and fear; here, independence; there, slavery.

These blessings—this security, this neighborliness, this independence of ours—were bought at a dear price. We've paid for them with the sweat of our brow, with the blood of our forefathers.

We owe the debts of gratitude and honor and respect to those who bought us those blessings. And we owe the greater debt of duty to them, so that their blood shall not have been shed in vain. This Memorial Day, 1941, let's pledge that duty to them.

ORLAND PARK LEGION

POST TO HOLD BARN

DANCE JUNE 7th

Orland Park Post 511 American Legion, are sponsoring their annual Barn Dance, evening, June 7th at Goodings Grove Hall on 143rd St., 4 miles west of Orland Park.

Last year, this affair drew the largest crowd ever to attend an old time dance of this sort. There were over five hundred people in attendance and a grand time was enjoyed by both the young people and the older folks.

There is a definite trend today towards some of the older dances that were popular years ago. Waltzes, square dances, two steps, Virginia reel and others are on the program for this big Barn Dance and everyone is guaranteed a good time.

The man who is conducting or "calling" this dance is none other than Guy Colby, the nationally famous WLS Barn Dance caller, whom you have heard hundreds of times over the air. The music will be supplied by the "Rancho Grande Boys" and without a doubt, they are as good as any Barn Dance orchestra in the business.

There will be favors and prizes given by Guy Colby as well as a handsome door prize given by the Legion Post. According to the chairman of this affair, tickets will be very reasonable so be sure to set this evening aside for one of the best times you have ever had in your life.

Refreshments will be served by the Post and the Auxiliary at a very nominal charge. Get your crowd together and join in the fun Saturday evening, June 7th at Goodings Grove Hall.

U. S. Engineers To Help China Build Factories

Small 'Pocket Industries' Nullify Bombings By Japanese.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK.—Plans to increase American technical aid to war torn China by sending a voluntary crew of American engineers to the Orient have been disclosed by John Garfield, Hollywood actor and leader of a group of relief workers on the west coast. His organization is collaborating with the movie colony group, headed by Dave Selznick, member of the National United China Relief committee.

"If we are the arsenal of democracy," stated Garfield, "then China should have our support in full." The actor went on to describe present-day conditions and summarized their plans to defeat the purpose of Japanese air raids by spreading and isolating manufacturing units into mountainous and sparsely settled territories. The engineers, who are scheduled for early departure, plan to introduce and increase modern technique in industrial production, allied with small units of space and equipment. A major objective will be the operation of motor repair stations along the important Burma road, over which most of the supplies for war reaches China.

The United China Relief campaign is now engaged in the task of raising

JOHN GARFIELD
"China will be victorious."

$5,000,000 for war relief and to maintain the 3,000 midget industries already established and to provide for thousands more.

Many Factories Moved.

An engineering feat of moving more than 400 complete factories containing 3,000 tons of machinery, wholly with human labor, was consummated in early spring, when thousands of coolies fled the war devastated coastal region, carrying the factories and equipment, piecemeal upon their backs, into the interior sections of their country. It was pointed out that the program served the double purpose of producing needed defense and civilian material and absorbing refugees in rebuilding for the new China.

Mr. Garfield stressed the fact that because of the widely separated points of manufacture and distribution that enemy fliers found it extremely difficult to locate the small centers and impractical to bomb them because of the relative amount of damage as compared to the cost of the bombs, the differential being more than 25 times, even when the objective was a direct hit on the first attempt. "A $250 bomb is too much, even for the Japanese, to inflict $10 worth of damage to the enemy," said Mr. Garfield. Money contributed to the fund, is allotted by H. H. Kung, minister of finance in Chungking at the rate of $7.00 per man for any group of workers willing to start a plant. The money is expended on a loan basis and in accordance with regulations of the old established central revolving fund plan. Mr. Garfield stated that previous loans have all been repaid.

Principle and machines never before seen or understood by the Chinese have become a vital factor in the war of supplies.

"We are teaching them to harness old water wheels to operate small dynamos, the technique of building tiny crucible steel and hearth furnaces, and many other methods of manufacturing and operating small, but efficient plants," said Mr. Garfield. He voiced the opinion that with American financial and technical help, China can finally emerge victorious to take her place with other democracies.

U. S. Army Officers Say 'Goodbye' to 'Hello'

WASHINGTON.—War regulations have deprived civilians and soldiers alike of many things. This time it's words. The army is streamlining its telephone service. No more will our khaki clad defenders draw a "Hello" with the speed of winter sorghum flowing from a jug, or breathe a frosty New England greeting into the mouthpiece. The luxury of this old established American custom has been abolished for the duration of the present emergency, in

Chinese Workers Supply Army

While China's armies are struggling to fight off invading Japanese forces, civilians are working in "nest pocket industries" in the interior. Chinese women (left) are making blankets for their nation, while workmen (right) are busy replacing the vital production of occupied regions along the coast.

Brazil Builds 'Defense Railways' To Link Ports With Inland Cities

RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL.—Is South America defenseless against an invasion threat? Military experts of the U. S. are co-operating with all Latin countries in a speedy survey of just what defenses this great continent could muster against belligerent attack. Nearly the whole of South America is east of New York, bringing it well within the danger zone of the European conflict.

Defense surveys indicate that the combined armies of South America would be under 2,000,000 men, to defend the 125,000,000 scattered citizens of this whole continent. Together, these nations have about 1,200 planes and a joint navy of about 175 ships to defend a coastline on two oceans that is thousands of miles long.

Brazil is said to be by far the best equipped in defenses, but Brazil is mammoth in size (47 per cent of South America), and most vulnerable to attack. If England's fleet were destroyed and Gibraltar taken, the U. S. fleet would be stretched along the entire Atlantic and Pacific seacoasts of two continents, in defense of the Western hemisphere. A strong block of well-defended American nations would be needed.

Chief problem for the defense of South America is its tremendous size and the great distances over which supplies and troops must be moved. It is admitted that whole sections of this continent might crumble defenseless before any strong concentration of enemy forces. There is a very real possibility of "splitting up" South America's nations, which are in general isolated from each other by lack of roads and railroads, as well as danger of isolating whole areas within the larger countries, by enemy forces working from within.

Improve Transportation.

Brazil's president, Getulio Vargas, who has already accomplished much in his program for modernizing and industrializing Brazil, has now turned his attention to the problem of transportation, and the necessity for spanning Brazil with railways and roads for defense. More than 520 airports have been built for Brazil's air defense, travel and communication.

To meet this emergency, President Vargas last year nationalized railroads in Brazil, bringing 15 different systems under Union control. He just recently created the national department of railways, which will launch an extensive rail-expansion program with U. S. financial aid. More than 3,000 kilometers of tracks have already been laid, modern bridges span mountains and rivers, and many tunnels open ways through mountains. A nation-wide highway building program now under way, is planned to link Brazil with all nations touching her borders.

Many of these new developments will link Brazil by land, air and water with her neighbor nations, greatly strengthening Pan-American defense. The Brazil-Bolivia railway now being built will bring in much-needed Bolivian oil supplies, while giving to Bolivia an outlet to Atlantic seaports. Crossing the heart of South America, a transcontinental railway from Santos, Brazil, to Arica, Chile, will open vast productive areas for exploitation.

Principal problem in connecting South American railways is presented by the rocky coastal ranges which follow each seacoast, cutting off port cities from rich interior resources. This brought about building of isolated short railways to port cities only; and now today, Latin countries face the huge expense of building many inter-connecting lines to connect port cities, as well as to connect isolated inland cities to each other.

Purchase New Equipment.

Impressive purchases of new railway equipment from the U. S. include 26 locomotives and nearly 500 cars now being delivered.

Highways and good roads are part of Brazil's defense program. The $3,000,000 highway bringing Brazil in touch with Paraguay, and the network of roads from 7 to 10,000 miles long in Rio Grande of the South, will link Brazil to Argentina, and Uruguay. Auto excursions now may only travel in good weather, but increasing auto tourist travel and the 6,000-mile auto races from B. A. to Peru and back again, last year, has encouraged building of better roads.

U. S. defense units are rushing completion of roads in Panama around the Canal region, and Latin nations along the West coast are building roads too although jungles, swamps and mountains bar the way. Some day the great Pan-American highway will complete its 16,847-mile route, a new "All-American Life-line." It will cost $150,000,000 to build, but it will open a vital route for military supplies, and one that will attract thousands of tourists in time of peace.

In air-travel, most significant new development is the extension of Pan Air lines into interior cities of Brazil, in competition with the German Condor line's seven air-routes across Brazil. More than 520 airports (more than the U. S. has) are a vital factor in Brazil's defense. Two big Condor planes are stranded in Rio, since Brazil declined to permit German trans-oceanic lines "at this inopportune time." But LATI, Italian lines continue to make their regular weekly trips to Rome, and recently expanded their lines into Argentina.

Exercise That Is of Benefit To Weak Heart

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

YEARS ago what was known as the Nauheim Bath and Schott System of Exercise was the treatment for a weak muscular heart. The patient raised his arm, leg, hand or foot against the resistance of the hand or hands of the physician or nurse who could thus regulate the amount of work or exercise the patient was allowed to do.

During the last few years there has been a tendency among physicians, including heart specialists, to give these patients with a weak muscular heart, no exercise whatever, believing that as men and women grow older it is rest the heart needs, not more work.

That the heart needs rest after illness of any kind and needs four to six weeks absolute bed rest after a heart attack is admitted. That a weak heart should not be given any exercise is considered unwise by many physicians who point out that certain kinds of exercise can "aid" the heart without causing too much heart activity. It might be well, therefore, to recall the suggestions of Dr. Josef B. Nylin, Philadelphia, in Medical Record, who points out the exercises that aid the heart.

1. Massage, which presses the blood out of the veins and causes the little blood vessels carrying blood from veins to arteries to open more widely and let more blood move to and from the part being massaged.

2. Passive movements (where the nurse moves the arms and legs and thus exercises the muscles), which cause the heart to send more blood to the parts. This "sucks" the blood from the part exercised and sends it back to the heart.

3. Breathing exercises which increase the flow of used blood on the right side of heart to the left side, from whence it goes to lungs to be purified and to all parts of the body. Now there is a great difference between the amount of work the heart must do when the patient takes exercise such as walking or games, and the amount done when the muscles are massaged or given "passive" movements, and the simple breathing exercises. But the heart does get exercise by these methods.

How Allergy Affects Stuttering

I WAS a member of a group of students whose object was the acquiring of scholarships and medals in competition with groups from other schools. We remained for an hour every afternoon after school. When the results were announced a member of our group stood first in the entire city yet she had never answered a question in class nor had she ever been asked to read. This was because she stammered.

We were all proud of her and yet felt sorry because we thought that she had something wrong with her tongue or her throat and would never be able to teach.

It is now known that stammering is not due to any defect of the tongue or throat but is due to nervousness or self-consciousness.

Drs. A. M. Kennedy and D. A. Williams, Cardiff, Wales, state that this tendency to nervousness and self-consciousness appears to be a factor in allergy also. These physicians investigated 100 stuttering children. In all cases except one, positive evidence of allergy was found in the personal or family history, 52 had a personal history and 48 of these also had a family history. Forty-eight had no personal history of allergy, but all but one gave a family history.

In a group of 1,000 school children who did not stutter, only about 2 per cent had a personal history of stuttering and a family history of only 9 per cent.

The thought is that in some individuals a portion of the nervous system can be so influenced that the blood vessel walls can be distended and allow swelling containing water to form and cause allergic symptoms—hives, head colds, hay fever. The blood vessel system, because it is under the control of the nervous system, may be influenced by fear, anxiety, anger and other emotions.

Hike Hazardous For a Boy Scout From Venezuela

Lad, Now in U. S., Relates Adventures in 3-Year Good Will Trek.

HOUSTON.—The saga of Boy Scout Julio Cesar Berrizbeitia may never be equaled.

The story of the 20-year-old Scout from Puerto Cabello, Venezuela, is one of adventure with savage Indians in Colombia, of killing thirst in a Peruvian desert and of stalking animals in Panama.

Berrizbeitia paused here on his 18,500-mile hike which began November 1, 1938, and will end when he places a wreath on George Washington's tomb at Mount Vernon.

The dusky, wiry youth is an Eagle Scout and has 13 merit badges. His present accomplishment in touring the Americas afoot as an "ambassador" of hemisphere goodwill rests lightly on his head.

Gesture of Friendship.

He explained that the hike is a gesture of friendship on the part of all South American Boy Scouts to their brother Scouts of North America.

Berrizbeitia began the long trek to Mount Vernon with five other Boy Scouts from Porto Cabello, first with a swing through South America.

"I am the only one left," he said simply. "We buried Jesus Antonio Garcia, 22, in Lima, after carrying his dead body about 200 miles through a Peruvian desert."

"That trek through the desert was one of our worst experiences. We ran out of water and went about a week without taking any fluid. The sand clogged our throats and our bodies were almost entirely dehydrated."

"Garcia died of thirst. We others staggered for days and were saved when we found a prospector's hut at the edge of the desert. After two days, he took us into Lima."

Undeterred, the five boys continued their hike, which took them ultimately through the Guianas, Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay, Chile, Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, Colombia, and Panama.

"We were attacked by the Indians on the Colombia border," Berrizbeitia said. "Without warning, they shot at us with arrows. I was struck in the neck and left leg, but we managed to escape in the jungle."

Sets Out Alone.

Soon afterward, one of the Scouts contracted pneumonia and three remained with him, deciding to return home, but Berrizbeitia set out alone. Friendly Panamanian Indians fed him snake meat.

"They cut the snake's head and tail off and ate the middle," the Scout said. "It tasted like pork."

He hiked through Costa Rica, Nicaragua, San Salvador, Honduras and to Mexico City, where he dined with Lázaro Cardenas, then president of Mexico.

Berrizbeitia entered the United States at Laredo, Texas. He said that he had declined "lifts" by motorists although many were offered. So far, he has worn out 50 pairs of boots. He travels with a 100-pound pack strapped to his shoulders. He wears a regulation Scout uniform and carries a dust-stained and faded Venezuelan banner.

Berrizbeitia's trip is financed by Venezuelan Boy Scouts and those of cities through which he passes.

Collie Dog Shows Off Solid Gold Bridgework

NEEDHAM, MASS.—When Laddie, a half-bred collie dog owned by Dr. Alby E. Hodgdon, bares his teeth he isn't angry—he's just proud of his bridgework.

Nine years ago the dog snapped a tooth gnawing a bone. So his master, a dentist, took impressions of the upper right incisor and in spare time made a solid gold replacement.

GLOUCESTER, MASS.—Miss Mary Mesquita is one of the few women carillon players in the world.

She became official carillonneur of the Church of Our Lady of Good Voyage in 1922. She uses both feet and hands to play the bells. Miss Mesquita describes the music as "a physically exhausting job" because the largest bell weighs 2,826 pounds.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.—R. S. Menefee, former school board president, has accused city officials of robbing the squirrels of their pecans for a mere $760.

Menefee lodged a petition with the city clerk asking that the council nullify a contract selling the pecans in Brackenridge park to J. T. Baker of San Saba.

British suppress news of submarine sinkings to avoid informing Germans of holes in blockade . . . Isolationists fail to arouse public sentiment against higher taxes.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—To many Americans one of the curious things about the British censorship is the suppression of so much good news.

It has never occurred to the British to explain why this reticence on their part about the sinking of U-boats was important in a military sense. Many Americans have assumed that it was just the normal hate of public boasting by British officials.

But it is far more important than that. It was important in the last war, when the same policy of secrecy with respect to submarine sinkings was followed. The nearest approach to an explanation was that it was bad for the morale of the German submarine crews if they never got any word about sinking or capture of the U-boats. All they knew was that such and such a submarine had sailed, and they never heard about it coming back.

All this may be true. Reports from Germany right after the close of the last war indicate that it was true.

But this has NOTHING to do with the motive of the British government in not releasing information about submarine sinkings.

STRATEGY IS MOTIVE

The real reason, as learned from authoritative British quarters here, is much higher strategy, and has nothing to do with psychological factors. It is really a blockade running problem.

Some of the German submarines have been hunting in packs. But for the most part they are spread out in the general shape of a fan guarding the approaches from the North Atlantic to Britain. Each submarine in this fan pattern is responsible for a good many miles of ocean, along the outer arc of the fan.

Now suppose the British succeed in sinking two or three submarines fairly close together. The admiralty at once knows about it, but the Germans do not find it out for a couple of days, perhaps longer. Obviously the submarines, though they can receive wireless orders and reports at night, cannot do any radio sending—cannot tell the Nazi sea command even that they are safe. To do so would disclose their position at once to the British.

So—the British, knowing that there is a hole in the line of the submarine blockade, rush merchant ships through that hole until it is plugged.

Which is why the British admiralty does not boast about submarine sinkings.

Congressmen's Mail Favors Tax Increase

One of the most curious factors in popular opinion at the moment, if one may take mail to congressmen as a fair indication of it, is the failure of the isolationist group—Burton Wheeler, Gerald Nye, Charles A. Lindbergh, et al.—to arouse sentiment against paying taxes, a substantial part of which will be used for aid to Britain—in short for war.

Most congressmen report that they actually have more mail from patriots willing to pay increased taxes than from constituents kicking because the burden is going to be so heavy.

Mr. Lindbergh, in particular, has always urged heavier spending for national defense, but even he has not made any headlines by insisting that the new taxes need not be so oppressive if we contented ourselves with building up our own defenses, and did not spend money also on supplies to be sent to Britain.

DIRECT APPEAL LACKING

If and when Lindbergh, Wheeler and Nye take that stand then will be the time that phase can be judged. So far there has been no direct appeal to the letter writing public to express itself. It might also be pointed out that a great many people who do understand what the tax schedules are going to do to them, talk plenty but do not write—that it is not the average person who sits down and writes a letter to his congressman, but a group that is in fact a very small minority.

This is absolutely true, but the fact is also true that this minority, cranks if they be, is very potent in this country and always has been. For right or wrong, congressmen take a certain part of the cross section from these letters written admittedly by a minority which enables them to conclude the public opinion.

So it is important that so far, on the eve of consideration of the tax bill, the opponents of aid to Britain have not been able to bring any pressure to bear through this channel against the tax boosts.

THE SMOKY YEARS

By ALAN LE MAY W.N.U. Release

INSTALLMENT 12 THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lew Gordon had built up a vast string of ranches in the West. King was killed by his powerful and unscrupulous competitor, Ben Thorpe. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, was determined to avenge his death in spite of the opposition

CHAPTER XVII

Shoshone Wilce, riding with Jody Gordon through the same hundred-mile snow which screened Bill Roper and Tex Long in their raid on the Little Dry, found himself the most bewildered and the most unhappy of men.

He could have refused to guide Jody Gordon to Bill Roper's rendezvous; he thought it improbable that Jody Gordon would have been able to locate the rendezvous alone. But whether she found it, or merely got herself lost, Shoshone Wilce would have been answerable to Bill Roper for leaving her to attempt the ride alone.

The alternative he had chosen offered no greater prospect for a long and helpful life. Lew Gordon would go wild as a wounded silvertip at the disappearance of his daughter; and every King-Gordon cowboy in the country would be scouring the brakes after Shoshone's scalp.

Jody believed now that the split between Lew Gordon and Bill Roper was the basis of inconceivable disaster—not only immediate and personal, but far-reaching in its import to the cow country. Together, those two very different cattlemen could have beaten Thorpe, and consolidated the King-Gordon empire.

Separated, Lew Gordon and Bill Roper were mutually destructive; Lew Gordon was probably right that Bill Roper's savage attacks upon the Thorpe interests were the cause of Ben Thorpe's heavy reprisals upon King-Gordon. And even though Roper might bring down Ben Thorpe in the end, which still seemed incredible, he could never profit by his victory, even if he lived. Unless Gordon and Roper could be reconciled, Roper would in the end become just one more outlawed cowboy whose trails could have no meaning, and only one end.

Jody Gordon had one other motive in attempting the all but hopeless reconciliation. She believed her father's life to be in the sharpest danger. Bill Roper, an even harder fighter than the old trail breaker who had trained him, would automatically take those precautions that would safeguard her father's life, if once they could be brought to work together again.

But the first move toward reconciliation must come from Bill Roper himself. If she could persuade Roper to this, there was a bare possibility that she could also manage her father.

It was a forlorn hope; but, as she saw it, of such vital importance that it could no longer be ignored. It was as if events that would alter the whole history of the cow country lay in her persuasion of these two stubborn men. She rode doggedly now, with set face, trusting Shoshone to find the way.

They rode until after midnight, blind, as far as Jody could see, in the wet fall of the snow. They threw down their bedrolls then in the shelter of stunted snow-laden trees, and Shoshone Wilce measured grain for the horses onto his own poncho.

They pushed on again early the next morning, miserable in the raw dawn, after coffee which Shoshone made in a frying pan. All day long they rode steadily, stopping only once for bread and bacon, and to bolster their horses with more grain.

The snow slackened off, giving place to a bitter wind. Jody's knees stiffened with saddle cramp and she continually had to nurse her fingers deep in her pockets to keep them from going numb. She had a strange sense of having taken an irrevocable step which she might find great reason to regret. The fact that the snow had hidden the trail they had made, so that no one could follow to find her, gave her a feeling of being cut off from everything friendly she had ever known. She no longer knew where she was. She set her eyes straight ahead, too proud to ask Shoshone how far they had come or how much farther they must go.

Just before dusk they climbed a long rocky ridge which commanded the length of a shallow valley set brokenly with juniper and ragged cedar.

Shoshone motioned her to stop her horse. "Wait a minute."

Far down the valley Jody Gordon could see a faint haze that blurred a rabbit-fur grey and brown of the brush and runty timber.

"That's smoke," Shoshone Wilce said at last. "This ought to be the place."

"So we really got here at last..."

"Two hours more."

"The smoke—that means he's there."

Shoshone Wilce, suspicious and doubtful by temperament, was less sure. "Don't know if it's him. Somebody's there. Or, anyway, somebody's been there."

A swift panic chilled Jody at the thought of meeting Bill Roper face to face again after so long a time. She tried to imagine what she was going to say to him, and was completely unable. She wondered how he would look, and whether he would be glad to see her.

of his sweetheart, Jody Gordon, and her father. After wiping Thorpe out of Texas, Roper conducted a great raid upon the vast herds on Thorpe's Montana ranches. Told that Jody had disappeared, he left his men and set out for the home of Lew Gordon, a man who was once his partner, but was now his enemy. Jody Gordon had tried to reconcile her father with Roper. He refused to compromise with Roper. She then set out with Shoshone Wilce, one of Roper's men, to find him.

lowed herself to be led into the little cabin at which she had hoped to find Bill Roper.

The shack in which she now found herself was a cramped makeshift, intended only as a shelter for cowboys, storm-caught while riding the northern limits of the Fork Creek range. A single lantern hung from a roof pole; and now, by its yellow light the two men studied her with an unconcealed amazement.

"By God," said the older of the two, "it's a girl, all right!"

The other man, tall enough so that the door at his back looked small, was much the younger of the two. His face was prematurely hard-cut—the face of a man who even in youth had learned an effectiveness in action upon which he could well rely. He spoke sharply.

"Jim—you know who this is? That's Lew Gordon's girl!"

"Good Lord Almighty! I believe you're right!"

"It's her, sure enough!"

"So you know me?" Jody said.

"I seen you once in Ogallala, and another time in Bandera."

The older man shifted his eyes to his partner. "Queerest turn of the cards," he said, "I ever seen in all my born days!"

The younger man's voice was sharp and strained. "Jim, we got to get her out of here, and get her out quick!"

The man called Jim appeared to consider intently, his eyes still on the other's face. "I ain't so sure," he said after a moment.

"You talk like a fool," the younger man snapped at his superior. "Look what we got! We got the law back of us. We got the most powerful cowman in the West back of us. We got one of the biggest rewards that's ever been hung up, right ready to drop into our hands. We've located Roper's main shebang, after working on it for months. We got all the odds in the world in our favor—and here comes this girl and bogs the whole works!"

"Just how do you figure she bogs it?"

"We got every chance of nailing our man, right here, any hour now. But don't ever think we'll nail him without a hell of a sharp fight. Suppose this girl gets hurt in this fight, or gets loose and loses herself, or runs out of luck some other way? The quicker we get her out of here—"

"Can't."

"What's the reason we can't?"

"We got the bear by the tail. She's dynamite so long as she's here. I grant you that. But what if we leave her go? She warns Roper off. Then where are we?"

The younger man's eyes were keen with a repressed excitement.

"Jim—you figure she come to meet Bill Roper here?"

"She didn't come here by accident," Leathers said with conviction, "any more than you or me. And she sure didn't come here to throw in with us."

A swift panic struck Jody with the shock of a blow in the face. If Jim Leathers wished, he could hold her here—literally as bait with which to draw the man whom it was his mission to kill. If Shoshone Wilce had got clear, and could reach Roper, Roper would certainly attack as soon as the best ponies of the raiders could bring him. Or, failing to locate Roper, Shoshone Wilce might even bring her father—and what orders Jim Leathers had in regard to Lew Gordon she could only surmise.

"I'm getting sick of this," Jody told Jim Leathers. "You owe me a horse; there can't possibly be any argument about that. I'll have to ask you to rope a pony and bring him to my saddle—and I'll be on my way!"

Slowly Leathers shook his head. "You won't give me a pony?"

"I'm afraid—you'll have to wait until your friends come, lady."

For Jody Gordon's white flash of anger there was no outlet whatever. She turned away to hide from them the furious tears that sprang into her eyes. She took off her sheepskin coat and flung it on the table, for the room was very hot; but because her fingers were still chilled to the bone she pulled off her gloves, tucked them in her belt, and went to the shallow fireplace to hold out her hands to the flames.

They went on talking now in the drawing, well-considered speech of the trail, long pauses marking every interchange. Whatever else they might think of her, they evidently did not consider that she implied any necessity to secrecy.

"If Roper is on his way," the younger rider said thoughtfully, "and this side rider of hers has got loose and meets him, so that Roper knows what he's up against—that might be kind of bad medicine, Jim. If he's got his war-riders with him—"

"I've missed hooking up with Roper twenty times when I thought I had him," Leathers said. "I'd sooner meet up with him on any terms, than carry back the word that I fell down."

stopped again for a full minute; then ten paces more.

Jody said, "What in the world—"

Wilce seized her arm and silenced her with a quick shake. Then suddenly—

An inarticulate oath snarled in Shoshone's throat; he snatched at Jody's rein, whirling her pony. His own horse came straight up on its hind legs as he spun it at close quarters.

"Get going!" he said between his teeth; and brought his roan down across her pony's flank in a snapping cut that made it plunge ahead. She heard the rip of steel on leather as Shoshone's gun came out. Then the silence of the night exploded into happenings that were incredible.

Two guns smashed out in a swift flurry of detonation. A queer whistling grunt was knocked out of Jody's horse. It dropped from under her, and the ground struck upward with stunning violence.

For a moment Jody Gordon lay motionless, her cheek buried in the cool snow. She was aware of further firing, and more than one running horse, and she tasted blood from a cut lip; but at first she was unable to think.

Someone said, "Well, we got one of 'em, anyway."

"Haul him inside."

"Look out now, Bud—no funny business." The voice was unknown to her, as was the figure that now bent over her. Suddenly the man jerked forward to peer at her more closely.

"What the—Hey! It's Calamity Jane, or somebody!"

Jody Gordon struggled to her feet, shock giving way to anger. "You fools, are you crazy? Bill Roper will kill you for this!"

There was a moment's silence, and she sensed rather than saw that they were looking at each other.

"Bill Roper," one of them repeated. "She says she's looking for Bill Roper!"

"Lady, you better come inside!"

Dazed and shaky as the fall of her killed horse had left her, Jody Gordon still appeared the most self-possessed of them all as she allowed herself to be led into the little cabin at which she had hoped to find Bill Roper.

The shack in which she now found herself was a cramped makeshift, intended only as a shelter for cowboys, storm-caught while riding the northern limits of the Fork Creek range. BROADENING CHRISTIAN HORIZONS: THE ANTIOCH MOVEMENT

LESSON TEXT—Acts 11:19-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.—Romans 1:16.

Scattered abroad! As the flying sparks and embers from a fire which is wildly beaten will light many new fires, just so persecution of the early Christians sent them abroad and established new centers for the preaching of the gospel. Verse 19 of our lesson connects with Acts 8:4. The ministry of Philip in Samaria was paralleled by that of others in Phenice, Cyprus, and now in Antioch. That great city was not far from Jerusalem, but it was far from God. A mighty city, rich in trade, it was also deep in all kinds of sin; but there it pleased God to establish a great center of Christian testimony. God loves to do new things (see, for example, II Cor. 5:17; Isa. 43:19; Ps. 33:3; Rev. 21:5).

I. A New Church (vv. 19-21).

What a splendid church it was! Here in the midst of the most evil surroundings the sweet flower of Christian faith grew, as it so often does.

It was a church built upon a faithful testimony by God's chosen witnesses "preaching the Lord Jesus" (v. 20). Their names are not noted, but their message is, and its blessed results. It was a gathering place for all people—Jews and Gentiles. The disciples from Jerusalem preached at first only to the Jews, but God sent others (v. 20), who preached His grace to the Gentiles.

Note also that the Antioch church was a living witness. "The hand of the Lord was with them"—little wonder then that "a great number believed and were turned to the Lord." Your church—and mine—might learn much by studying the church at Antioch.

II. A New Fellowship (vv. 22-26).

The genius of Christianity is fellowship. Those who have a religious belief which makes them exclusive—not willing to fellowship with other Christians—do not truly represent their Lord.

When the church at Jerusalem heard the good news, they sent Barnabas to help the new converts and establish fellowship. He was the ideal man to send, for "he was a good man." It is far more important that a man be good than that he be brilliant if he is to edify young converts. He was "full of the Holy Ghost." He was also "full of faith," and no man that is not, need undertake the work of instructing and developing young converts, especially converts from heathenism so dark as that in Antioch. He was free from the love of gold (4:36, 37). He was free from personal ambition and jealousy in his work (vv. 25, 26). He was very sharp-eyed to see the sincerity and promise of a young convert (9:27). "When he was come, and had seen the grace of God, (he) was glad" (John W. Bradbury).

Into this new fellowship of life and service the gracious and generous Barnabas brought a new evangelist—Saul, God's prepared man for this hour.

But we have another new thing in our lesson, one of great importance.

III. A New Name (vv. 26-30).

Christian, the beautiful name of those who follow Christ was first used at Antioch. It may have held a measure of contempt (see Acts 26:28; I Pet. 4:16), but it was a remarkably suitable name for those who had come out of paganism now to live, in their old surroundings, a new life, a separated life, the Christ life.

This name "combines Jewish thought with Greek and Latin language, and thus, like the inscription on the cross, bears witness to the universality of Christianity as a religion for the whole world. The idea of 'Christ' (Messiah) is Jewish; the substantive 'Christ' (Christos) is Greek, and the adjectival termination 'ian' (ianus) is Latin." This new name was intended to introduce and mark the difference between Jews and Gentiles on the one hand, and those who, whether Jews or Gentiles, were followers of Jesus Christ. . . . The term 'Christian' evidently points to the Person of Christ, and to those who are associated with Him as His followers. It implies and involves union and close association with Christ" (W. H. Griffith Thomas).

Those believers at Antioch not only bore the name, they practiced the life of Christ. Next Sunday we shall study their activity for Christ, for in that city began the great missionary movement which goes on to our day. In our lesson today we have another practical expression of their faith. They gave of their means, "every man according to his abilities," to meet the need of their new-found Jewish brethren in Judea.

Where Anger Is a Crime

Returned to his home in Montreal after 11 years' missionary work in the Arctic, Father Stephen Bazin says he had great difficulty in explaining the war to the Eskimos. They could not imagine anyone angry enough to fight. He told them the war started because one people tried to steal another's property.

"The Eskimos who, I believe, are the most peace-loving, happiest people in the world, know now that a war is going on, though they still think it is strange," he says. "By nature they are calm and patient. Anger is a grave crime with them. They spend hours laughing and talking, and have really no worries. There is no such thing as a sad Eskimo."

Rinsing hair brushes in a solution of alum water will stiffen up the bristles.

Oven-burned dishes can be cleaned by soaking them in a solution of borax and water.

Granulated honey can be restored to its natural form by placing it in hot water.

To keep fruit from falling to the bottom of a cake try adding the fruit before you have stirred in any flour. Do not dredge it with flour.

To prevent the sides of ice bags and hot water bottles from sticking together in storage, sprinkle a little talcum powder inside them after they are thoroughly dried.

THE PUBLIC nature of advertising benefits everyone it touches. It benefits the public by describing exactly the products that are offered. It benefits employees, because the advertiser must be more fair and just than the employer who has no obligation to the public. These benefits of advertising are quite apart from the obvious benefits which advertising confers—the lower prices, the higher quality, the better service that go with advertised goods and firms.

The Boy Scout meeting of May 9 was very eventful. Jacobson, Jim were wig-wagging while Bovik and Nieman did the receiving. Bagby practiced his deaf and dumb signaling. A few of the boys tried building a fire with only two matches and using no paper. The boys are showing fine progress in passing their tests. Scouting is a process of building character and developing leadership among boys. Thereby they are better prepared when they reach manhood.

Scout troops are organized for boys from 12 years and up. The adult leaders are not paid, but we know that these men thru the time spent with the Boy Scout organization are capable of seeing scouting carried thru to its goal.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"Soul and Body" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 25.

The Golden Text was, "I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Thessalonians 5:23).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Rejoice the soul of thy servant: for unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul. All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O Lord; and shall glorify thy name. For thou art great, and doest wondrous things: thou art God alone" (Psalms 86:4, 9, 10).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "It is objected to Christian Science that it claims God as the only absolute Life and Soul, and man to be His idea,—that is, His image. It should be added that this is claimed to represent the normal, healthful, and sinless condition of man in divine Science, and that this claim is made because the Scriptures say that God has created man in His own image and after His Likeness" (p. 344).

The table was attractively decorated with three lovely arrangements of garden flowers, composed of varied colored columbines, spireas and yellow bachelor buttons, and the nut cups and place cards in spring colors. Covers were laid for twelve the guests being the members of the former Moke Camp Fire Girls who remained most intimate during the years of Camp Fire work and in the years following disorganization. This luncheon was therefore a re-union of these members who were first organized in 1915, the first reunion for many years.

At the close of the serving, the former guardian, Mrs. Wm. Semmler, as toast master spoke in behalf of the friendship which has held these friends together and called upon each for a brief impromptu speech. A loving homage was paid to the memory of the organizer of this group, Mrs. Emma Bechstein who has passed away; and also to Mrs. Kate Cooper for her loving thought and interest in this group.

A letter was read from one of the members, Mrs. Alma Bechstein Cooper, which had just arrived that day from her home in Florida by air mail.

Much pleasure was derived from reminiscing, and in singing their old Camp Fire songs, when it was found out that the outstanding alto was still outstanding and the sopranos could still hit the high notes. Pictures were taken of the group in the Cooper garden.

Besides Mrs. Gorham and her mother, there were present: Mrs. Everett Cooper, Miss Celia Cooper, Mrs. Semmler and Mrs. Earl Stellwagen of Mokena; Mrs. Harvey Spiess of Frankfort; Mrs. Ruth Schneider of Chicago; Mrs. Frank Valy and Mrs. Howard Ayres of New Lenox and Mrs. Ralph Bush and Mrs. Chas. Dalmaris of Joliet.

ORLAND PARK

At a musical concert, held on Friday evening in the High school auditorium under the sponsorship of the Orland Park PTA petite Nancy Rose Zeller, phenomenal seven year old soprano and costume recitalist, achieved a most outstanding artistic success.

Beautiful as a Dresden doll, graceful as a fairy, and costumed in perfect accord with her characterizations she presented a stage appearance that filled the eye and won the hearts of her audience. Possessing a voice of rare quality and sweetness and of exceptional power for one so young, little Miss Zeller sang four series of song numbers. In the first suite which consisted of the numbers "The Little Damsel", "Sweetest Little Fello" and "Second Minuet", she was most becomingly garbed in Colonial costume. A colorful Indian regalia formed the background for the second suite, "Waters of Minnetonka", "Wim", and "Indian Love Call". Overalls, straw hat, and the most demure expression in the world helped make the Kiddie Suite "Lusted", "Animal Crackers", and "Usual Way" a thing of joy to listen to. In the final suite, consisting of military numbers, "The Good Old U. S. A.", "The Wooden Soldier" and "Marching Along", Nancy Rose presented a most soldierly figure in a white satin, gold and red grenadier costume. And when she sang her closing song "God Bless America", the audience stood and joined in the singing of the second verse.

The singing of 12 songs and 3 encores in so short a space of time is a task that might well tire a much more mature voice, yet the final number found her voice as strong, as fresh and as sweet as it was in the opening snog. Her interpretation of her songs, her poise and her ability to project her personality as well as her voice over the footlights, mark her as a real artist.

Miss Zeller has received her training from John Loring Cooke, world famous singer and now a successful teacher of voice and expression and bids fair to become a finished artiste in her own right.

In between Miss Zeller's song suites yauddence was entertained by students of Mrs. H. Adele Cooper. A piano quartet composed of Charlyn West, Mabel Uthe, Cornelia Van der Myden and Mrs. Cooper played the "Andante Theme from the Surprise Symphony" of Hayden-Bibor. Mrs. Cooper played the part originally billed for Ethel Reish, who was unable to appear because of illness. Moszkowski's "Valse Brillante" was effectively presented as a two piano-electric hands number by June Schussler, Gertrude Bormet, Virginia Gee and Mildred Doctor. Two numbers, "Roughish Kitten" and "March in F" were played as a 2 piano-8 hands number by Cornelia Van der Myden, Mabel Uthe, Joyce Beagley and Vera Carlson and Hayden's "Gypsy Rondo" was presented as a 2 piano number by Vera and Hilda Zebrs.

Mrs. John Loring Cooke played the piano accompaniments for Miss Zeller.

The program was arranged by Mrs. H. Adele Cooper, music chairman of the Orland PTA and the proceeds of the concert will be given to the music department of the Orland Park school.

From Camp Croft, South Carolina comes word from Bill Heiting that the "going is getting tough". He says that they are getting actual combat training, deploying and skirmishing, and bayonet technique with forced marches under full equipment thrown in for good measure. He also says he now knows how it feels to fire a machine gun shooting over 500 rounds a minute. Bill says he gets his copy of the Orland Park Herald regularly and reads every item in it and then passes it on to Arrian Yunker who in turn does the same thing. Arrian wrote to his dad that he was keeping tab on him thru the columns of the Herald and just to prove it, sent him a clipping from the paper.

Both boys have been appointed as squad leaders and are assisting in the instruction of the newer recruits.

Both boys report good treatment and excellent "chow". In fact, Arrian writes that he has gained 11 lbs. in weight since putting his feet under Uncle Sam's table.

'A PICNICKING WE WILL GO...'
(See Recipes Below)

IT'S PICNIC TIME!

The soft, sunny days of late May and early June tempt even the most conscientious to turn their backs on work, and, since "the only way to get rid of a temptation is to yield to it," a picnic is the answer!

One reason for the nation-wide popularity of picnics is that they're easy on the lady of the house... sliced tomatoes and green onions for salad... corn-on-the-cob, if a vegetable is wanted ("roasting ears" may be cooked in hot coals, allowing 20 minutes to a half hour for the best flavor)... taste-tempting cheeseburgers... lemonade, milk or coffee, or all three... and dessert—it's as simple as that!

No dishes to wash afterward... no table linen for the laundry bag... in fact, it's almost a case of "no work and all play!"

For that "something hot" which is a picnic "must," I suggest plump, juicy cheeseburgers. If you're picnicking in the woods, your array of "burgers" probably won't look like the above picture, but they'll no doubt taste the same. If you are entertaining the family or guests at a "back yard" supper, you can serve a large tray of cheeseburgers with assorted relishes, shoe-string potatoes, and tall glasses of milk or iced tea—they'll love the combination!

*Cheeseburgers With Piquant Sauce.

2 pounds ground beef
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
3/4 pound American cheese
1/2 pound butter
8 buttered buns

Mix ground beef with milk, salt and pepper. Form 8 patties of meat about 3 inches in diameter. Cut 8 slices of cheese slightly smaller than size of meat patties. Melt butter in skillet and fry patties slowly for about 10 to 15 minutes, turning several times during the cooking period. Place on buttered toasted buns, spread with piquant sauce and top with a slice of cheese. (If prepared indoors, place under broiler flame until cheese begins to melt). Serves 8.

Piquant Sauce.

1/2 cup chili sauce
1/4 cup pickle relish
1 tablespoon prepared mustard, or 1 tablespoon horseradish

Mix all ingredients together well. If a more highly seasoned sauce is preferred, a teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce may be added.

Or you may want to try fried eggs and hamburger, sandwich style. Cook hamburgers, set aside to keep hot. Fry eggs in same skillet, and serve eggs atop the hamburgers.

LYNN SAYS:

When hamburgers are included in the picnic menu, form the patties of ground meat, mixed with minced onion and seasoning, before you leave home. Place between waxed paper, and they're ready to cook when the fire is ready.

Hash goes upstage when it is used as a bun filler. Scoop out rolls, (leftover or fresh) butter insides and pile full of savory cooked hash. Brush top with melted butter or gravy and bake 15 minutes in moderate oven. Ideal for out-of-door suppers.

To "dress-up" your picnic bill-of-fare, there are colorful oilcloth and/or paper tablecloths and napkins. You can find them designed to carry out nearly any theme you so desire. And, as an added tip, in case you're planning to spread an oilcloth covering on the ground, attach it to a pair of old curtain rollers. They'll prevent even the strongest wind from blowing it away!

Good news for picnic lovers are the new "lunch" kits. You'll find two one-quart vacuum bottles, plus a metal lunch box. The bottles carry their own cups, nested within their screw tops. The nicest thing, however, is the leg which converts the inside lid into a table.

IMAGINARY DIALOGUES: GARGANTUA AND TOTO

("All efforts to get Gargantua, the circus gorilla, and Toto, the Cuban gorilla imported to be his mate, to be friends have failed." — News item.)

Gargantua (after one look)—Am I seeing things?

Toto—That's just what I was asking myself.

Gargantua—I don't know what you are, but do me a favor and scram.

Toto—Listen, Funny Face, I'm not here of my own accord. This visit isn't my idea.

Gargantua—Well, it certainly isn't mine. Gee, but you're a homely dame.

Toto—That goes double for you. If I was as ugly as you I'd do something about it.

Gargantua (sadly)—There's only one thing you can do about it, and that's join a circus.

Toto—That's what I'm here for now!

Gargantua—So that's it! They're trying to co-star me! Well, they can't do that to me.

Toto—Calm yourself. It's not my idea.

Gargantua—Nobody could get you here if you didn't want to come.

Toto—A dozen men brought me here.

Gargantua—You could have licked 'em all!

Toto—You must have read Arthur Brisbane.

Gargantua—Aw, go away, please! It was tough enough around here when there was only one of us.

Toto—Didn't you ever think of getting married?

Gargantua—No, that's my press agent's idea.

Toto—Two can live as cheap as one, Gargie.

Gargantua—Yes, but what do I care what I cost this circus. It's got plenty of dough.

Toto—What you need is a nice wife.

Gargantua—Where would I find one?

Toto—How about me?

Gargantua (with a look of horror)—I'm not monkey enough to marry a girl with a mug like yours.

Toto—You're no jungle Clark Gable yourself.

Gargantua—Maybe not, but I've got prestige. I'm probably the most famous gorilla in the world.

Toto—You're just another big gorilla to me.

Gargantua—Where did you come from, anyhow?

Toto—Cuba.

Gargantua—Now I know what caused all that unrest there!

Toto—Listen, you can't insult me like that. I wouldn't take you for a husband. If I was your wife I'd give you poison.

Gargantua—And if I was your husband I'd take it.

Both (in a fury)—You BIG GORILLA!

BANKING BY TIMETABLE

A bank has been opened in a railroad depot at New Rochelle, N. Y., and it is at least a novel idea. The country has always wanted to see a demonstration of how money could be withdrawn or deposited at full gallop by a man with his arms full of garden tools and his coat half off.

Elmer Twitchell wants to know if the depot banks runs on eastern standard or daylight saving time.

And there is sure to be the confused commuter who isn't certain whether he was to deposit $8 just before the 7:55 a. m. or deposit 7:55 just before the $8 pulled in.

The U. S. treasury announces that, despite metal priorities, it will continue to issue nickels. This country has got to have a coin that will do the work the penny used to do, or nearly so.

Congressmen grow gabby at cocktail parties and spill important war information, it is alleged. And probably it's true. Congressmen are talky enough when they're cold sober, let alone when they're on their fourth old-fashioned.

Between the dances Doris and her partner were discussing the other people there.

"There's Mabel," exclaimed Doris, "she thinks no man is good enough for her."

"Well," replied the young man, "she may be right."

"Yes; and she may be left, too!"

Diner Turned the Tables On Conniving Couple

Upon receiving his bill, the diner added it up and found that he had been overcharged $1.

"How come?" he asked, looking sharply at the waitress.

"Well, you see, sir," she replied, "the cashier bet me half a dollar that you wouldn't see it and I bet him you would. Just a friendly little wager."

With a smile the customer wrote something on the back of the bill, folded it, and said: "Take that to the cashier."

She did so, and on opening it the two were startled to read: "I'll bet $5 I shall not be here when you get back."

And he wasn't.
